

“A revolutionary non-toxic cancer cure you can’t have.”

In 1970's Dr Burzinski a MD in the USA discovered gene-targeted cancer medicines called Antineoplastons which proved to be far superior to anything the drug companies could come up with. In fact the survival rate for some forms of childhood brain cancers, which are always fatal, has a 100% success rate using Dr Burzinski's protocol. However, over the last 30 years the FDA has tried to crush Dr Burzinski as his non-toxic system posed a threat to the domination of the current cancer therapy relying on Surgery, Chemotherapy and Radiation with the pathetic long-term success rate of just 2.3%. This single invention could threaten to bankrupt the very lucrative cancer business that the health industry has a monopoly on. The American people who are just as sick and tired of the lies and the deceit in the health industry, stood behind Dr Burzinski and allowed him to survive the full onslaught of the American government and it's corrupt enforcement apparatus such as the FDA. It takes a lot of effort watching this movie - towards the end of the movie you start to feel pretty sick at the corruption in the FDA and the corrupt American political system that puts corporate profits before human need:

NICE (not very nice people) in the UK is just as corrupt as the American equivalent. They are hell bent on protecting the Big Pharma at the detriment of everyone else. They have specifically banned any doctor in the UK from administering intravenous Vitamin-C, a safer, non-toxic and the most effective system for all viruses and hard cancers. If you allow intravenous Vitamin-C to be used in the NHS, it will wipe out the multi-billion dollar anti-viral and antibiotic industry, but moreover, it will wipe out the multi-billion dollar cancer industry – however, it will save millions of lives and save the NHS millions of pounds on drug bills – according to NICE that is just not on. In one case intravenous Vitamin-C saved the life of a Bird Flue victim who also developed leukaemia – more of this story later on, but for now, lets stick to Dr Burzynski protocol.

Please support this guy by buying his DVD and passing it on to all of your loved ones, so they get to know the true deceit in the health industry. Write to your MP and ask them to look all the people working at NICE to be investigated for fraud and for conflict of interests – they should be looking after us but instead they are looking after the profits of the drug industry.

“Why does the health industry treat us like dirt?”

For many years I could not understand why we, the complimentary and alternative therapists were working miracles, helping people who had been totally let down by the conventional medicine, being treated like dirt? The NHS loves to put people on anti-depressants for as long as it takes, sometimes for life, whereas we can get people off these drugs in 2-4 hours? When we remove the root cause of their depression, most of our clients never get depressed or take their anti-depressants again. We do the same thing with addictions but at a fraction of the cost of the NHS methods. There is absolutely no comparison between the two methods, both in terms of cost or effectiveness. Yet, we get no help what-so-ever and we have to put up with an unfair playing field created by successive governments.

Look at the way Nick Clegg is jumping up and down trying to maintain the old order – he is worried sick about his own political future rather than people like us. Already there are talks about not going for the cheapest option, thereby diluting free market forces to start with. They will also not let private enterprise get involved, so they can continue wasting public funds and force their pathetic offerings on us. Denying people a choice is becoming a norm in the NHS. Why pay the (downtrodden) therapist a measly £100 when you can pay the Big Pharma £100,000 keeping someone on anti-depressants for years. Well done Nick, remind me to never vote for you ever again.

Then I realised that we were not up against ignorance, entrenched ideas, political correctness and greed (must maintain jobs for life at any cost), but what can only be described as the ‘medical mafia’. The medical profession has inadvertently become part of this mafia. These people have not only been ‘shitting’ (excuse my French) on therapists like us, but on humanity in general for hundreds of years. Don’t believe me then read on/...

“A simple cure to most modern day illnesses.”

In the 1850’s a group of eminent doctors in the USA came forward with a revolutionary idea – most modern day diseases were the result of dehydration and low salt intake. This idea was so profound that it shook the very fabric of medical thinking at the time. As we grow older, we lose our ability to detect thirst, and so most people become severely dehydrated. Then we compound the problem by drinking tea, coffee, alcohol and commercial drinks that leads to further dehydration. The idea was to cut out all these 'junk' drinks and replace them with filtered or distilled water together with a bit of sea salt (not table salt). People were asked to drink water based on half of their body weight in ounces – this normally amounts to a large glass of water every 2h (for most adults) with half teaspoon of sea-salt.

People who had end stage lung cancer; non-Hodgkin's Lymphoma (the size of a melon), asthma, allergies, high blood pressure, cholesterol, diabetes etc. threw away their tablets after a few months and never looked back. People admitted that this was going to put a lot of doctors and drug companies out of business, so the discovery was neatly brushed under the carpet and conveniently forgotten about.

There have been so many studies that show, that salt is good for you, and does not raise your blood pressure. These studies also show, low salt levels cause high mortality rates though strokes and high blood pressure.

"Swedish researchers report that treating elderly men who have a diastolic blood pressure less than 90 mm Hg with antihypertensive drugs increases their risk of having a heart attack by a factor of four."

Merlo J, et al. Incidence of myocardial infarction in elderly men being treated with antihypertensive drugs: population based cohort study. Br Med J 1996; 313: 457-61

On 05-06-2011 an article in the Daily Mail talks about a study, which again, proves that salt, is good for you. But the medical community is again, up in arms trying to find fault with these studies.

"In the eight-year study, people with the lowest salt intake had the highest rate of death from heart disease. In fact, those with less salty diets actually had slightly higher death rates from heart disease. The study, which followed 3,681 healthy European men and women aged 60 or younger, for about eight years, also found that above-average salt intake did not appear to increase the danger of developing high blood pressure."

Report in the issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, May 2011.

To admit that they have been wrong all of these years, would mean admitting that they have been unlawfully killing people with Anti-hypertensives (which removes salt from your body) for years. Remember the NHS posters warning people about the dangers of high salt intake – daft ideas never seem to amaze me. Now, how could you expect the drug industry (and doctors) to admit to murder?

My argument is, why doesn't your doctor tell you about these studies and let you make your own mind up? Most anti-hypertensive raise blood pressure rather than reduce it so how do they get approved in the first place? The drug industry is so good at fabricating good results from useless ones. They can statistically prove, very convincingly, that light does not exist. As Winston Churchill once said, "there are lies, damn lies and there are statistics". Most drugs that have killed people during clinical trails still get approved – the drug company conveniently removes the line that says "Have there been any fatalities", from the forms before they get submitted to the FDA. In fact, pay the FDA a million dollars, and you can get pretty much anything approved.

The cholesterol myth is just as feeble as the BP one – a lot of people are making a lot of money through our misery. Just like high BP, every university study has shown the ineffectiveness of statins (the corporate killers) to artificially reduce cholesterol has been ignored. Again, to admit that statins have been causing unnecessary deaths would be to admit to murder. With 30% of the NHS drug bill going on statins, there is no incentive for the drug companies to change. Here is just the latest research published in WDDTU, June 2011.

'Bad' LDL cholesterol is good after all – it keeps us alive. Doctor's – and drug companies – have got it badly wrong about cholesterol, a new study has discovered. Even the 'bad' LDL (low-density lipoprotein) cholesterol is good, and plays a vital role in keeping us alive. The lead researcher, Steve Riechman from Texas A&M University, states; "If you get rid of LDL cholesterol, you would die".

Now why do the drug companies and the medical profession lie to us? Because it makes the doctors look good (they know what's good for us). Also it makes loads of money for the drug companies (and indirectly for the government). Then fear and the powerful influence of doctors force dangerous drugs on us. I suppose it also fulfils the need for doctors to stay in control by prescribing dangerous and ineffective drugs rather to admit ignorance. What the doctors should really be doing instead is helping us to make fundamental lifestyle changes. Most modern day diseases are a result of lifestyle choices we make.

"A National Disgrace."

Time after time we see people who have been kept on anti-depressants for years, or people are condemned to be on these drugs for life, come off them in one to two sessions of our luggage of life programme. Some people have been on sleeping pills for years; never have a problem sleeping again after our help.

One person had been put on every daft thing the NHS has in its toolkit for quitting smoking, NRT numerous times, Zyban three times, Champix for three months and nothing worked – in just one 2h session he quit smoking 80-100 cigarettes a day. When he told his doctor, she simply replied: “I do not believe in hypnotherapy”. The fact that it was the only thing that had worked for her patient was not good enough. Maybe she should ask a child of five if she is really that thick to figure this out for herself.

Let's not listen to public opinion, keep our ignorant blinkers on and continue to mutilate, maim and kill people for years to come - well that's the deceit of modern medicine for you.
